

I find it odd that the FCC keeps interfering in matters that seem obviously protected by our constitution. XM satellite radio is the greatest radio I have ever had. I do not see why the FCC has any right to pick and choose the media that I get my weather and traffic reports from especially since those reports are coming from a licensed provider that I am paying for. I'm sure the FCC has lobbyists that for some reason think they can make a reasonable explanation out of why XM should not provide these reports but any lunatic could probably debate the explanations right back. I'm sure glad to know that the FCC finds it acceptable to waste the time, effort, and money to fight such a worthless battle. Please note the sarcasm in that last sentence.
